Successful ISO/EN 27001:2013 certification for Berlin-based IT consultancy PROMOS consult – a promising start to the new year

Berlin, 10 January 2024 – The renowned SAP consulting and systems company PROMOS consult, based in Berlin, is starting the year 2024 with important news. The company has successfully obtained ISO/EN 27001:2013 certification, an internationally recognised standard for information security management systems (ISMS).

The certification, which was awarded by independent auditors from TÜV Rheinland, underlines PROMOS' high standards and commitment to information security. ISO/EN 27001:2013 sets out strict requirements for the development, implementation, maintenance and continuous improvement of an ISMS.

With this important certification, PROMOS not only demonstrates its commitment to securing sensitive data, but also underlines the resilience and quality of its internal processes and IT infrastructures. The company has thus demonstrated its ability to protect customers and partners from potential threats in the best possible way, while ensuring that the highest standards of data protection are maintained.

“The ISO/EN 27001:2013 certification is a milestone for our company and underlines our ongoing commitment to the security of information and systems. We have taken a very conscientious approach to setting up an ISMS and have worked intensively on the necessary adjustments to our processes and structures. We were supported in this by HiSolution, an established company for IT security issues. The fact that we have now received the initial certification directly proves that our approach was the right one,” explains Volker Schulz, Chief Information Officer at PROMOS consult, commenting on the background to the certification. He further adds: “Particularly in view of our growing global customer base, the internationally valid certification is an important step for our future business activities abroad.”

The certification comes at a time when information security is becoming increasingly important in the digital world. It enables PROMOS to position itself as a trustworthy partner for companies looking for innovative IT solutions without compromising on security. The certification can be accessed publicly under the ID 9000026778 on TÜV Rheinland's certificate database: www.certipedia.com.

With the successful achievement of ISO/EN 27001:2013 certification, PROMOS has set a promising starting point for a successful 2024 and consolidated its position as a leading IT consultancy for the real estate industry.
